$150,000,000 Saved If U. S. Gives Away Ships

If the Shipping Board would give away its active ships with a guarantee to assure their operation by private interests for five years, $150,000,000 would be saved to the taxpayers, Commissioner Meyer Lissner, of the Shipping Board, declared yesterday. He did not advocate adoption of a "give away" policy, but urged a more liberal sales policy.

"While I do not mean to suggest doing so," Commissioner Lissner said, "for the sake of illustration suppose we gave away our active ships with a guarantee securing their operation for the coming five years. We would thereby have saved at least $150,000,000 to the taxpayers. If we could realize anything at all on the ships—and of course we can—we would just be that much better off."

The commissioner said that the critics of ship sales forgot or disregarded the fact that the Shipping Board is losing money in operating practically every one of its services. Operating losses of the government fleet can not be reduced below $30,000,000 a year in the next few years, Mr. Lissner said.

Suburban

ROCKVILLE.

In the presence of a large gathering of members of all denominations, the cornerstone of the $9,000 addition to the Methodist church at Potomac was laid yesterday with elaborate exercises. Morning and afternoon services were held. At noon all visitors from a distance were entertained at luncheon by members of the congregation.

The Rev. W. L. Willig, pastor of the church, was master of ceremonies. Addresses were delivered by the Rev. Henry P. Hamil and the Rev. E. V. Regester, of Washington; the Rev. Nolan B. Harmon, jr., pastor of the Rockville Methodist church; the Rev. P. Rowland Wagner, pastor of the Rockville Baptist church; George H. Lamar and Willis B. Burdette, of Rockville. A large choir, under the direction of J. Windsor Walker, sang.

The addition to be erected, which will be of frame so as to conform to the present structure, will consist of an auditorium, 30 by 54 feet, with a basement, 30 by 30, which will be equipped for social functions. The present building will be partitioned off into Sunday school rooms. The building committee is composed of the Rev. W. L. Willig, chairman; G. Edington Bell, J. Windsor Walker, Joseph R. Lechlider, Edgar R. Perry and Robert L. Saunders. G. Edington Bell is chairman of the finance committee.

Unless the weather is unusually mild in early autumn, much of the corn now growing in the county will fall to mature and the farmers will, as a consequence, suffer to the extent of thousands of dollars. Frequent rains throughout the greater part of the spring made it impossible for many farmers to plant corn until June. Should an early heavy frost come many fields of growing corn would be virtually ruined.

A large number of Montgomery county Democrats are expected to attend the big Democratic mass meeting at Frederick Wednesday, which will be addressed by John W. Davis, candidate for President. Mr. Davis will speak in Baltimore Wednesday evening.

Under the direction of Mrs. Jesse W. Nicholson, of Chevy Chase, who is chairman of the Women's Democratic club of Montgomery county, in addition to being a member of the Democratic national congressional committee, the Democratic women have held several big meetings in behalf of their party's presidential and congressional candidates and have planned many more such gatherings. Led by Mrs. Harry A. Dawson, of Rockville, and Mrs. Edward L. Stock, of Bethesda, chairman and vice chairman, respectively, of the Women's Republican club of the county, the Republican women likewise have held several big meetings and have established a headquarters in Rockville from which activities are being directed. The officers of registration will be in session Tuesday to register and transfer qualified voters.

Although the election is but five weeks off, the men of the two parties have not yet gotten started. They are, however, expected to wake up within the next few days and can be relied upon, it is thought, to make up for lost time. Now that the women have taken hold, it is believed that the campaign work of both parties will be looked after in a thorough manner and that an unprecedented heavy vote will be cast in the county.

George W. Knigst, sr., formerly a resident of Lay Hill, Montgomery county, died at his home near Beltsville, Md., aged 59 years. His death was due to paralysis and followed a short illness. He is survived by his wife and three children: George W. Knight, jr., and Mrs. Oden Dwyer, of Beltsville, and Mrs. George H. Becker, of Washington. Funeral services will be conducted at 11 o'clock tomorrow morning in the home. Burial will be in the cemetery at Lay Hill.

John William Jackson, 21, of Craigsville, Va., and Miss Lila Bell Hicks, 20, of Fordwick, Va., were married in Rockville by the Rev. P. Rowland Wagner, pastor of the Baptist church.

ALEXANDRIA POLICE, AFTER TAX-DODGERS, FIND AN HONEST MAN

J. H. Costello, After Sleepless Hours, Rushes to Station at Midnight.

CONSCIENCE TROUBLED BY UNPAID CITY TAXES

Mrs. Ellen T. Bitzer and Mrs. Julia Stella Pearson Are Dead.

THE WASHINGTON POST BUREAU,
124 N. Patrick St., Alexandria, Va.

The Alexandria police, who recently have been charged with the duty of collecting unpaid city taxes, say they have found a person whose name should appear in the hall of fame as an honest man.

Shortly after midnight Saturday J. H. Costello, of 422 South Fairfax street, came into police headquarters and told Sergt. Wilkinson that upon reaching home Saturday evening he had been informed by his wife that an officer had been to the house with a tax bill. Costello said he retired as usual, but the thought that he owed the city taxes which might be overdue had so worried him that after several hours he arose, dressed and went to police headquarters to pay the bill, and thereby be able to sleep with a clear conscience.

Sergt. Wilkinson advised him to go to bed and call again at 6 o'clock yesterday evening, by which time, the seargeant said he would endeavor to find the bill. Promptly at 6 o'clock Costello appeared and was told how he might settle the troublesome bill without undue loss of sleep.

"The first man I have ever seen who really wanted to pay his city taxes," Sergt. Wilkinson said.

Mrs. Ellen T. Bitzer, wife of Dr. James H. Bitzer, died at her home, 615 Prince street, yesterday afternoon. Mrs. Bitzer had been ill for a long time. Surviving, beside her husband, are one daughter, Miss Kathleen Bitzer, and two sons, Robert H. and Wesley T. Bitzer.

Funeral services will be conducted at the home at 2:30 o'clock tomorrow afternoon, by the Rev. Ernest M. Delaney and the Rev. Dr. Ernest M. Thacker. Interment will be in Presbyterian cemetery.

Mrs. Julia Stella Pearson, 26 years old, wife of Maurice Pearson, died Saturday night at the Alexandria hospital. Surviving are her husband and six children. Funeral services will be conducted at the Temple Baptist church at 1:30 o'clock tomorrow afternoon by the Rev. Rayland T. Dodge, pastor, and burial will be in Bethel cemetery.

What might be termed a personal fire was extinguished by the fire department yesterday when a box of safety matches caught fire in the pocket of J. R. Dodd, of 1424 Clifton street, Washington, at King and Columbus streets. Dodd was arrested, and a charge of being drunk on the street filed against him.

2,000 AT CATHEDRAL HONOR BISHOP FREEMAN

First Anniversary of His Consecration Is Celebrated in Bethlehem Chapel.

1,000 ARE CROWDED OUT

More than 2,000 persons tried to crowd into the small inclosure of Bethlehem chapel, Mount St. Alban, to hear the services attending the first anniversary of Bishop James E. Freeman's consecration. Inclement weather prevented the open air services, which were to have been the last of the year.

Some 600 persons found seats within the chapel while other hundreds jammed the corridors. It was estimated that approximately 1,000 were kept from the services entirely, but the majority of them visited the curator's office at the chapel entrance and inspected a model of the National Cathedral.

Bishop Freeman's address was largely a review of the work within the diocese during the past year, particularly as relating to completion of the cathedral. He told of the services he had conducted in the summer at several watering places and the interest expressed in the edifice by visitors at those places. He is just as confident that the edifice will be completed, he declared, as he is that the sun will shine again. The curator's office will in future be open on Sundays as well as week days, it was announced, to give out information concerning the cathedral.

William Freeman, of Minneapolis, son of the bishop, and his wife, who are here for Miss Elsie Freeman's marriage Saturday, attended the services.

Conference Called To Conserve Timber

A national conference to discuss utilization of forest products, called by Secretary of Agriculture Wallace, will be held here November 19 and 20. The conference, it is said, will mark the most comprehensive attempt ever made in this country to have economical use of existing timber supplies take its essential place in the national forestry program.

The drain on the country's forests can be reduced at least one-fourth by better manufacturing methods and use, the Secretary said in a letter to 2,000 representatives of the wood using industries, consumers, building crafts and the public who have been invited to attend the conference.

Shaft Unveiled in France Tribute to U. S. Aid in War

One of Triad of Poilus Carved on Monument Bears Features of Quentin Roosevelt. Stands on Shell-cleared Eminence.

Paris, Sept. 28.—"My countrymen will be deeply touched that one of the soldiers crowning this monument is an American and that the sculptor chose as his model a man who bore a most honored name—Quentin Roosevelt—said Sheldon Whitehouse, charge d'affaires of the United States embassy, at the unveiling today of a monument on the spot where once stood the famous Navarin farmhouse.

"There could be no better proof for posterity of the strength of Franco-American friendship," Mr. Whitehouse added, "than the inscription on this monument regarding the American divisions which fought with their French comrades-in-arms under command of that gallant soldier, Gen. Gouraud, for it shows our willingness to die for the same ideal."

Mr. Whitehouse expressed the regret of Myron T. Herrick, the Amerisan Ambassador, at his inability to be present. Mr. Herrick is in the United States.

The monument consists of the figure of three poilus 15 feet high, one a scout, one a grenade thrower and the other a machine-gun man, the last having the features of Quentin Roosevelt. Each man is depicted in action.

The monument is a 60-foot pedestal of rose granite. It stands on a hillock, dominating the immense battlefield extending from Moronvilliers to the Argonne, and was erected to commemorate the French and American soldiers who fell around Rheims.

The monument is visible for many miles, the war devastation having left no trees to shut off the view. More than 650,000 francs were raised in France and the United States to erect the monument.

Gen. Gouraud in an address at the unveiling gave a complete history of the battles that were fought in the vicinity of the shaft, in which, he said, 104 divisions took part. He went into details of the fighting that took place in July, 1918, when the last German rush was crushed. He paid tribute to the work of the American troops under his command, and spoke of his joy one day at the end of June in seeing among the reinforcements sent by Marshal Petain "that fine Forty-second division, which was to take so great a part in the battle by our side."

Jacques Dumesnil, minister of the navy, representing the government, in his address thanked Mr. Whitehouse for his kindly expressions. "If we salute our French dead," said the minister, "we salute also with the same grateful tenderness, I won't say your dead from America, but again our dead."

"We shall never forget," the minister added, "that you, our allies of yesterday, and our friends of today, came to fight by our side, because you loved France, and judged her fine and deserving."

Among the countless flags of the veterans associations surrounding the monument were those of the American Legion and the world war veterans. They were brought to the shaft by American uniformed soldiers and delegates of the La Fayette Escadrille. The day's ceremony began with religious services at which a Catholic bishop, a Catholic chaplain, a protestant pastor and a rabbi officiated.

Two other memorials were inaugurated today with impressive ceremonies, one to Scotch soldiers at Beau Hamel in the Somme, where Marshal Foch unveiled a monument and building at Givenchy, given by the of city of Liverpool in memory of many of the townsmen of that city who were killed there. The lord mayor of Liverpool was present at the latter ceremony.

DYAR'S TUNNEL HOBBY MAY BE CURTAILED

Scientist Must Get Permits in Future; Officials Investigate Possible Danger.

Startled by the extent of the secret burrowing of Harrison G. Dyar, scientist of the Smithsonian Institute, Maj. John W. Oehmann, District building inspector, today will inspect the tunnels dug by the scientist and lay before the District commissioners a report of his findings.

Mr. Dyar's hobby of tunnel building was exposed when discovery of an underground labyrinth in the rear of 1510 Twenty-first street northwest, adjacent to Pelham Courts, a large apartment house, was followed by a second discovery that he has extensively tunneled under and around his present home at 804 B street southwest.

The tunnelling hobby may lead the scientist into legal difficulties, since it is forbidden to construct a tunnel under or adjacent to a building without a special permit from the District government. If it is found that either of the tunnels endangers Mr. Dyar's home or surrounding buildings steps will be taken immediately to prevent any damage, Maj. Oehmann said.

District officials do not desire, however, to inflict legal punishment for the indulgence of his "hobby" unless his recreation has endangered others, Maj. Oehmann said. Any tunnel building activities of the scientist in the future, however, must be conducted only when proper permit has been requested and been given by the District building inspector.

Impressive services in the synagogues marked the observance last night of the Jewish New Year festival, which came in with sundown. The festival will be observed in the Orthodox churches through tomorrow, but will end in the others at sundown today.

All Jewry was called upon to arise from its indifference toward religion by the sounding of the Shofar, or "ram's horn." Greetings were extended by Rabbi J. T. In the course of these services Rabbi Loeb will deliver a sermon—"Rosh-Hashonah—A Call to World Conscience." Services will also be held tomorrow, the rabbi having for his subject, "Truth, Justice and Peace."

Rabbi Abram Simon led services which began at 8 o'clock last night at the Eighth Street temple. Services will be held at the temple at 10 o'clock this morning. The Washington Hebrew congregation, which worships at this temple, observes only the one day.

George Miller, 35 years old, an insane patient in Walter Reed hospital, escaped Wednesday and still is at large. This was disclosed yesterday when hospital authorities requested detective headquarters to assist in the search for him.

It was learned last night that Miller apparently escaped through a window and lowered himself to the ground. He was dressed in convalescent clothing.

Miller had been under observation at the hospital for some time. Whether he is of the violent type physicians were unable to say.

Church School Keeps Doheny Conditionally

Santa Barbara, Calif., Sept. 28.—After considerable argument among delegates to the forty-ninth Southern California conference of the Methodist Episcopal church here yesterday Edward L. Doheny, jr., son of the California oil millionaire, was reelected a trustee of the University of California, a Methodist institution.

The younger Mr. Doheny, who is associated with his father in the Pan-American Petroleum Corporation, is a defendant in civil and criminal cases brought by the government in connection with oil leases, which, it is alleged, were improperly granted by the government.

The conference in renaming Mr. Doheny adopted a resolution to be presented to the trustees asking that in the event the charges against Doheny are sustained, his services with the university be terminated.

Real Bookworms Provide New Immigration Problem

It's a matter for the government entomologists, not the Department of Labor—the country's latest immigration problem.

Bookworms, literally speaking, are abusing America's big heartedness, according to a complaint made to the government by the American Paper and Pulp association. The association spoke in behalf of a New York company which found an army of insects of microscopic size in a shipment of Finnish book paper. They were in the paper in such strength as to have eaten their way through wooden staves in which the paper was packed, let alone ruining the paper. Shipments of paper entering at Jacksonville, Fla., and other ports have been found similarly infested.

FINAL WORK ON STADIUM RUSHED FOR DEDICATION

Catholic University Athletic Field Will Be Finished by Saturday.

25,000 PERMANENT SEATS

With the opening of Catholic university and the return of students this morning work of preparing the school's new stadium for its dedication Saturday will be rushed. The stadium proper has been completed, the remaining work merely being finishing touches.

Officials connected with the dedication of the stadium were elated yesterday with the showing the institution's football team made in its game with Holy Cross College at Worcester, Mass. This, they said, augurs for a spirited contest Saturday afternoon, when the team clashes with the formidable Quantico Marines. Beginning today the football squad will practice daily in the stadium.

Ticket offices are being constructed outside the inclosure, while on the inside the work of lining the playing field and the erection of goal posts is demanding immediate attention. Today the three lower rows of seats will be removed at a central part of the field for the establishment of boxes. This is made possible by a novel feature in the construction of the stadium.

Isaac Gans, president of the Washington Chamber of Commerce, was a visitor at the stadium yesterday and enthused over the possibility of using the stadium for great national gatherings and particularly for the Army-Navy football game.

It was pointed out in the inspection of the stadium that whereas the present seating capacity is only about 25,000, this can be doubled on three days' notice by the erection of substantial temporary seats upon an upper plateau. Officials adhere to this arrangement rather than a permanent full capacity at this time to avoid a great additional expense in keeping up the stadium.

Board to Investigate Third-Degree Charges

Formal charges filed against several members of the Rockville police force by Lewis and Otho Poole, brothers of Littleton S. Poole, who, they declared, confessed to a capital offense against 14-year-old Irene Mellott after a third-degree grilling, were turned over to Dr. Benjamin O. Perry, president of the board of Montgomery county commissioners, yesterday by William L. Aud, chief of police of Rockville.

The commissioners will endeavor to ascertain whether or not Poole was taken to the basement of the courthouse some time between midnight and morning on the day he confessed and severely flogged with a section of rubber hose, as his brothers alleged.
